SANTA CLAUS AT BLENHEIM. The Duke and Duchess of Mar'borough intend to signalize the Christmas bolidays by a series of attractive entertainments at Bienheim. The young Duchess has now completed her task of restoring Blendheim to a magdifficence it has not known for a century. She is artistic and everywhere in the palace is evidence of her decorative

The antiquity of a great part of the urniture was its only claim to consid-ration, while the draperies and hangngs were in a moth-eaten and tattered condition, except in a few of the living rooms of the palace. These dilapidated furnishings have now been replaced by the most elegant modern work and every room in the nuge mansion, from end to end, has restored with admirable taste Walls that were hung with dingy tap stries have been covered with exquis tely tinted French brocades, and heavy it curtains copied from renowned models screen the window-, which long have been closed. All is bright, luxu-rious and rich and in keeping with the oble rooms of aistoric memories.

The Duchess's own favorite sitting. frawing-rooms and boudoir are alway applied with a wealth of lovely li-wers, while photographs of Ameri-can women are very numerous. Magawhich is turnished in white and red Blenheim's neglected appearance has vinished. The Duchess has hospitatory resolved that its revived glories shall be erjoyed by all of her friends and county neighbors. Harmony habite more been restored between the malace and the vicarage, a harmony which was interrupted when the vicas eiused to allow the church bells to be rung when the Duke's father returned Bienheim with his second wife, Mrs. Hammersley. The Duchess, in token of this reconciliation, is organizing two dramatic of the restoration fund of Woodstock church. The long library in the pal-ace is being fitted with a stage. A vigmaker and theatrical costumer was it Blenheim last week to consult about dresses for a new and original nusical comedy, entitled "An Idle Hour," especially written by Ian Ma'colm, M. P., and composed by C. Perkins, of Birmingham.

Two Famous Skeletons .- A commission that was appointed by M. Rambod, minister of public instruction and worship, on Saturday opened tombs in the Pantheon, at Paris, and settled the question concerning the whereabouts of the ashes of Voltaire and Rousseau, which the late Alphonse Daudet called the greatest of the cervolvaire's skull had fallen in two parts, which, when placed together, gave a striking presentment of his features. Rousseau's skull showed no trace of a bullet-wound, thus disproving the wide y-entertained belief that he committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a revolver.

THE GAZETTE.-The Alexandria Gazette is one of our most valued, not to say invaluable, exchanges. It gives the State news thoroughly and suc e netly, and its Washington correspondent catches about all there is of interest in that city to northern Virginia pec-ple. The Gazette is venerable valu able and vigorous, and may it "live long and prosper.—[Leesburg Mirror.
